

@Brockley.org Email

Oaksys Tech is a technology company which operates globally from its base in Brockley. We view the issue of local social contribution as an important part of our company ethos. In the early days of the Internet explosion we acted quickly to register and preserve the Internet domain names of Brockley.com and Brockley.org on behalf of the people of Brockley in south east London. In those early days opportunists with no connection to the local places were registering names in the hope of a quick profit.

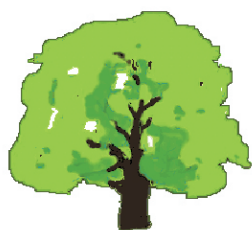

As a trial we are now beginning to offer personal email addresses to people resident in Brockley. Those email addresses will be based on the Brockley.org Internet domain name. The first stage of this is the free issue of email accounts to 20 people or organisations located in Brockley. After a trial period we are intending to extend availability of these email accounts. In future there may be a small charge to cover costs for any new accounts, but we do not intend to make any profit from this facility. There are no age limits on this, but children under the age of 16 must obtain the approval of their parents or guardians.

The current offerings include:

- a personal email address & account
- 10 M Bytes disk space
- interface to your existing email
- webmail facility
- a personal weblog
- a private web based diary
- antispam and privacy facility

Applications are invited now and the 20 "winners" will be selected at random from the applications received by the 30th May 2008.

The terms and conditions are shown on page 2/reverse of this form.
